long recognized as a master teacher at writing programs like VONA the Loft and the Stonecoast MFA with A Stranger's Journey David Mura has written a book on creative writing that addresses our increasingly diverse American literature. Mura argues for a more inclusive and expansive definition of craft particularly in relationship to race even as he elucidates timeless rules of narrative construction in fiction and memoir. His essays offer technique-focused readings of writers such as James Baldwin, ZZ Packer, Maxine Hong Kingston, Mary Karr, and Garrett Hongo while making compelling connections to Mura's own life and work as a Japanese American writer. In A Stranger's Journey, Mura poses two central questions: the first involves identity—how is writing an exploration of who one is and one's place in the world? Mura examines how the myriad identities in our changing contemporary canon have led to new challenges regarding both craft and pedagogy. Here, like Toni Morrison's Playing in the Dark or Jeff Chang's Who We Be, A Stranger's Journey breaks new ground in our understanding of the relationship between the issues of race, literature, and culture. The book's second central question involves structure: how does one tell a story? Mura provides clear, insightful narrative tools that any writer may use, taking in techniques from fiction, screenplays, playwriting, and myth. Through this process, Mura candidly explores the newly evolved aesthetic principles of memoir and how questions of identity occupy a central place in contemporary memoir.

Travel was closely connected to Margaret Laurence's creativity. Laurence realized that her travels, especially to Africa, provided her with new perspectives on Canada. Heart of a Stranger, originally published in 1976, is a fascinating travelogue chronicling Laurence's geographical journeys to many lands and historic places. She notes, "I saw, somewhat to my surprise, that they are all in one way or another travel articles, and by travel I mean both those voyages which are outer and those voyages which are inner." Laurence writes about her travels to Egypt in "Good Morning to the Grandson of Ramesses the Second," to Scotland in "Road from the Isles," and to Greece in "Sayonara Agamemnon." In the very best intentions, Laurence sees herself as a stranger in a strange land. In Ghana, she reflects on the many places she lived in: "Put out one or two more flags down East the Shack and where the world began." Professor Nora Foster Stovel's new introduction to Heart of a Traveller explores how Laurence's experiences in other lands influenced and shaped her writing. She contends that Heart of a Stranger constitutes a concealed autobiography for, in chronicling her literal life journey, Laurence also reveals her spiritual odyssey.

this book sets out the principles of engineering practice knowledge that has come to light through more than a decade of research by the author and his students studying engineers at work until now this knowledge has been almost entirely unwritten passed on invisibly from one generation of engineers to the next what engineers refer to as experience this is a book for all engineers it distils the knowledge of many experts in one volume the book will help engineers enjoy a more satisfying and rewarding career and provide more valuable results for their employers and clients the book focuses on issues often seen as non technical in the world of engineering yet it shows how these issues are thoroughly technical engineering firms traditionally have sought expert advice on these aspects from management schools often regarding these aspects of engineering practice as something to do with psychology or organisational behaviour the results are normally disappointing because management schools and psychologists have limited insight and understanding of the technical dimensions in engineering work little if any of the material in this book can be obtained from management texts or courses management schools have avoided the technical dimension of workplace practices and that is precisely what characterises engineering practice the technical dimension infuses almost every aspect of an engineer s working day and cannot be avoided that s why this book is so necessary there has not yet been any authoritative source or guidance to bridge the gap between inanimate technical issues and organisational behaviour this book fills this gap in our knowledge is based on rigorous research and yet is written in a style which is accessible for a wide audience
